Residence: The design expresses a sense of nature through simplicity, without confining with any definitions of style. Making use of the high ceiling, mezzanine levels are created to extend space. The multi-function area at raised platform acts as the intermediate between different levels and merges semi-private area with common space to promote interaction among the family. Segmented steps instead of long stairs link up the platforms, with the wooden curve gliding along the ceiling from the foyer to living area across dining area, outlining the path of the flat and ties the entire space together.
